WAREHOUSES IN PEMBROKE

Are Burned Monday Evening at a Very Heavy Loss.

ESTIMATED AT $16,000.

Insurance $13,000 On Buildings and Contents--Clarkeville Millers Lose.

Two warehouses burned in Pembroke Monday about 5:30 p. m. The one in which the fire originated was owned by W. W. Garnett and Mrs. Lizzie Williams and rented by A. O. Doraty & Co. It contained 200 tons of hay and 3000 bushels of wheat, with no insurance on building but $2,500 on the contents.

The other was owned by L. McCombs and contained 10,000 bushels of wheat with $1,500 insurance on the building and $9,000 on the contents.

The wheat was owned by the Dunlop Milling Co., of Clarksville. The loss on wheat was about $12,000 and on hay about $2,000.

The buildings were frame and were worth together about $2,500.

In addition to the wheat and hay, the Doraty & Co., building contained a car load of hoghead staves and other articles of small value.

The origin of the fire is not definitely known. Workmen were in the Doraty warehouse up to five o'clock and the most plausible theory is that some of them were smoking and threw down a match. The fire was discovered soon after the men left.

Pembroke has no fire company and the combustible nature of the buildings and its contents soon put the Doraty warehouse beyond hope, and although a bucket brigade worked hard the fire soon spread to the McComb warehouse adjoining. Doraty & Co. had another warehouse across the street, which was saved by hard work.

BIG BARN

Filled With Tobacco is Destroyed by Fire.

A large tobacco barn belonging to J. H. Duval, who resides seven miles northeast of the city, on the Greenville road, was destroyed by fire about 2 o'clock yesterday morning. The building contained 12,000 pounds of tobacco and the loss is probably a thousand dollars or more, with no insurance. Mr. Duval had been firing the tobacco, but the fire had been pulled from under it early in the night. The supposition is that some of the coals were left, however, and the building caught in this manner.

Value of Insurance.

CRUSHED BY AN ENGINE.

L. & N. Fireman Killed by Train at Latham Station Yesterday Morning.

BODY BADLY MANGLED.

After Inquest Remains Were Sent to Nashville For Interment.

H. L. Cole, an L. & N. fireman, was killed by the cars near Latham station yesterday morning about 5 o'clock. His train arrived from Earlinton at 3 o'clock, and, after getting orders, ran down to the rock quarry to be loaded with ballast. Cole, acting as flagman, came back up the track to a cattle ran in sight of Latham, where he sat down on the track. He set his red lantern so as to flag another freight train then due. As the train, loaded with ballast, started back north, conductor D. E. Lynn, who was on the pilot, saw an object on the track. He called and Cole raised his head, but made no effort toward getting off. The train was then too close to stop and he was run over. One arm and both legs were severed and his head and chest were crushed. He lived only a few minutes.

Cole was about 25 years old and leaves a widowed mother in Nashville. He had been in the employ of the railroad company for several years. Coroner Allensworth held an inquest and the remains were sent to Nashville last evening.

RANDALL'S BEST CATCH.

By Colin S. Collins.

Copyright, 1908, by Associated Literary Press.

Winter quarters had awakened from its long nap. Over in the car sheds men were touching up the brilliant advance cars with vermilion and gold leaf. In the wagon shop staid rows of chariots resplendent in gilt and crimson. In the last loft troupes were being given to the "big tops," the huge canvas structures which went to make up the city of tents. From animal house and training barn could be heard the sounds of activity as trainers put horses and elephants through their paces, while the performers freshed up their acts. In three weeks the show would take to the road, opening in the south to escape the frosts and to get an additional month of "season."

Caley Randall's appearance in the ring barn was the signal for a general stoppage of work on the part of those who had been with the show the season before. Randall had been a general favorite, and even the equestrian director, the autocrat of affairs in the ring, came over to greet the newcomer. "The rest of the boys are here and have your traps all up," he told Caley, with a glance aloft where the trapeze rigging of the Randall-Ransome troupe glittered in the light, filtering through the wire glass. "The other troupe is here."

"Who the mischief are they?" demanded Randall curiously. "I never heard of the Randall troupe."

"Neither did any one else," agreed the director. "They do a ripping good casting act, though, and they'll work well in the big act. Come over and I'll introduce you."

He led the way across the tankard to where stood a little group of men and women curiously regarding his approach. Randall was looked up in the circus world, and the Bannards, accustomed to the drudgery of obscure one ring wagon circuses and small vaudeville performances, looked with awe upon this star of the big show. Some of Randall's boys were standing with the group; but, after a pleasant nod to his own men and an acknowledgment of the introduction to the strangers, Randall saw only one of the troupe, a little, graceful girl not yet out of her teens.

Bannard hurried to compliment Randall on his work, but Caley scarcely heard him. His attention was centered upon this queerly girl with the flashing black eyes, and when at last he moved on to the dressing room to see that his trunk was all right he turned to his "bearer," who did the catches for his leaps.

"What was the old chap saying?" he asked. "I didn't quite catch."

Caley laughed. "Better get that idea out of your head," he advised. "The girl is the whole show with that troupe, and the old man doesn't want her marrying into another act."

"You be longer," said Randall. "If you think you're funny I don't mind telling you that you're not."

"You agreed to a rehearsal at 3 o'clock," said Caley. "It's all right, Caley. I'd be stuck on her myself if I wasn't married. Come out and get a bite to eat."

Randall followed Caley across the lot to the hotel, where most of the performers stopped, and by 2 they were in practice dress and up in the dome of the practice ring, getting the stiffness out of their joints.

It was the custom with the show to mass all the aerial acts into one big troupe for a finish to the show. While the arena was being made ready for the hippodrome, the attention was centered upon the one big act, and in this Bannard's troupe worked with Randall's. A huge special apparatus was provided for this act, and it was to get used to this that the two acts were to rehearse together.

To his delight Caley found that Bannard's daughter did the principal leaping for their act, and that she shared the narrow perch from which he worked. It was scarcely more than a shelf, high above the ring, but to the gymnast it was as secure as the ring itself, and Caley found time to chat with the girl while they worked out the details of the routine of tricks.

But the rehearsal was over and Caley, hurrying into his street clothes, reached the exit to wait for Grace Bannard. He realized that what Caley had said was right. Bannard whisked Grace and her sister off to the boarding house where they were stopping before Caley had a chance to say a word.

But opposition only made him the more determined. There was little time to talk up on the shelf where they rehearsed, for either Caley or the girl was flying through the air while the other rested, and at best conversation was fragmentary.

where "razorbacks" were employed to get up the tent and the performers could spend the night comfortably in the sleeper and not have to reach the lot until breakfast time.

But Caley was not to be kept off. They were having their last rehearsal before the traps were taken down and put aboard the cars. Once the season opened there would be little time for courtship, and he determined to put his fate to the test.

"Next time we work it will be before an audience," he commented as he climbed to the platform to which she already had been hoisted. "No more chance for old time snuggles."

"I should say not," she assented, with a smile. "We'll be too busy then."

Caley let his swing go and away across the space. Clute slipped down on his swing to catch the count, and a moment later Caley shot across the space, let go of his swing to grasp Clute's hands, pinioned and caught the swing again on its return. Just as he reached the platform Grace shot past him to do her leap. She landed back on the platform pretty.

"We won't have a chance to talk down below either," Caley went on as unconcernedly as though they had not risked their necks since the preceding sentence. "I never get a chance to talk to you."

"Father doesn't like"—she commenced as Caley sprang from the platform. "I know he doesn't," agreed Caley as he swung back and Grace jumped out. She was back in a moment, and a lesser member of the troupe did some single trapeze work to rest the stars.

"Let's fool papa and get married this evening," he suggested. "I'll be in front of your boarding house at half past 10, and I'll have it all arranged with the minister."

Before he could get his answer the girl shot past him, and he was gone before she had returned. The next few tricks kept them too busy to talk; then came a breathing space, and he turned his gaze to the girl.

He had to undo good use of his time, for the act was drawing to a close, and he could not delay a trick without throwing the entire routine into confusion. He believed an assent trembled on her lips as he swung out, but his heart sank as he swung back to the perch and Grace shot past him.

This time she would not return to the platform, but would stay on the other side for the "somersault pass," which concluded the act. For this Bannard came over to his platform and swung him out on the swing, while Clute, from the other side, threw Grace to her father as Caley turned a somersault in the air and caught Clute's hands the instant after she left him.

It was a trick that brought the audience to its feet the year before, and Caley was proud of it, for it was his own invention.

The swing was properly made, and as he threw the somersault he heard a cry below him. It was only the one word—"Yes," but he knew what it meant. He had been accepted in mid-air, and Grace would meet him that evening. He made his dive to the net and came up with his face wreathed in smiles.

"Pretty catch," commented Clute, swinging over the edge of the net and landing beside him.

"The catch of a lifetime," asserted Randall joyously, and he made off for the dressing room, leaving Clute wondering what had happened.

It is the catch of a lifetime," asserted Randall joyously, and he made off for the dressing room, leaving Clute wondering what had happened.

NIGHTS OF UNREST.

No Sleep, No Rest, No Peace for the Sufferer From Kidney Troubles.

No peace for the kidney sufferer—Pain and distress from morn to night. Get up with a lame back, Twinge of backache bother you all day.

Dull aching breaks your rest at night. Urinary disorders add to your misery.

Get at the cause—cure the kidneys. Doan's Kidney Pills will work the cure.

They're for the kidneys only—W. G. Dodd, Farmer, Cadiz, Ky., says: "My kidney trouble was brought on by a fall and I suffered from the complaint for over eight years. There were severe pains in the small of my back and if I attempted to stoop or lift, sharp twinges would dart through my body.

I could not sleep well at night on account of the aching in my back and during the day was usually tired. My eyesight was blurred, I suffered from dizzy spells and also had headaches. Occasionally my kidneys would become disordered and at such times the secretions would be free in action. For three or four weeks prior to using Doan's Kidney Pills, I had been unable to do any work.

After taking a few doses of this remedy I was able to go to work and I am happy to state that I have not lost any time account of kidney troubles since."

NIGHT RIDER CONSPIRACY

Defense Will Attempt to Prove In Trial at Clarksville.

THE BENNETT CASE.

Crucial Point in Case Expected to be Reached Yesterday.

Clarksville, Tenn., Sept. 16.—The fact that a black cloth or mask covered the features of Vaughn Bennett, the alleged night rider, when his body was found was brought out in the examination of the first two witnesses for the State in the trial of Gardner and Hunt.

W. C. Cooksey, the first witness, who lives within a short distance of the scene of the killing, did not remember seeing any such mask and denied having made such a statement to Will Woodson, a lawyer, who got a statement from him shortly after the killing. Ernest Woodson, who accompanied Cooksey to the place where the bodies were, stated that there was a black cloth tied around young Bennett's forehead which covered his left eye.

The testimony of Cooksey and Woodson was practically the same except in regard to the mask. Both live within 250 yards of the place where the bodies of the young man and the two horses were found. Both were at home the night of the kiling, but neither heard any of the shots.

According to Chief Robinson's evidence, the defendants went out from Clarksville in his buggy the night of the killing, along with three others, with the purpose of intercepting a party of armed, masked men who were supposed to be headed for Clarksville. When they returned, about 4 o'clock the following morning, according to Chief Robinson, Gardner told him that one or two men and two horses had been killed, and that he and Hunt had been in the vicinity where the killing occurred, while the other members of the party were not at that point.
They were armed with automatic shotguns loaded with buckshot, with which size shot young Bennett was killed. Robinson also stated Gardner told him that morning that Dr. Crouch, who had telephoned the approach of the party, had lifted the mask from the face of the dead man and had recognized Vaughn Bennett.

The crucial point in the case will be reached to-morrow morning.
Judge Tyler will hear arguments from counsel as to the competency of evidence relating to the alleged night rider conspiracy.

The test which has been looked for from the very start came late this afternoon in the testimony of J.
E. Robinson, Chief of Police and chief of the guard which is maintained for the protection of the city against night riders. Incidentally it was during his testimony that the first clear inkling of the theory upon which State and defense alike will work was brought out. It seems probable now, in the light of all that has been said and done, that the defense will practically admit that the alleged night rider was at least probably killed by Gardner and Hunt, but will plead justifiable homicide.

ACROBATS PLAY BELLS.

Most Novel and Best-Dressed Act in All Europe Coming Here.

The most novel and best dressed act which has originated in Europe in many years is that of the Mar-nello-Marnitz family, a company of bell-ringing acrobats from Italy, who will be seen in Hopkinsville on Thursday, Oct. 1, with Ringling Brothers' World's Greatest Shows.

The people of the act are three sisters and a brother. There are many features to the performance that are new, and the act ends with a little program of music played on silver-toned bells while the members of the company are doing head balancing and somersault leaps from shoulder to shoulder. The act is new to this country, having been secured upon its first presentation in Paris last winter by an agent of Ringling Brothers.

The cosmopolitan aspect of last year's company is striking. From Russia comes Riccobono, the great horse trainer, and his group of wonderful animals. In France was found the Patty brothers, who walk, skip the rope and dance on their heads. Les Bastines, wonderful equestrian acrobats; the St. Leon family of acrobats; Burgoon and Clara, gymnasts; the Martell troupe of bicyclists; the Balliots and the Milets, aerialists, and Mile. La Belle Roche, the daring young woman direct an automobile on a double somersault flight across a fifty foot gap.

The Mirza Golem acrobats were released by the Shah of Persia for their first tour of America, and the Imperial Japanese troupe comes from the Mikado's court. Kerslake, the teacher of pigs, hails from New Zealand, and from Australia comes the Jackson family of cyclists, the Flying Jordans and the Belfords, acrobats. Germany contributes Marguerite and Hanely, acrobats; Scha-del, the zebra rider; the Prossit Trio of burlesque bar performers, and Horton and Linden, clown aerialists.
The Clarksons, aerialists, Clark brothers, riders, and the Aerial Shaws and Smiths are from England, while the Marnello Marnitz family and the Bedini troupe of riders are from Italy. The Foreore company of burlesque bullfighters; De Marlo the contortionist, and Alvarez, the aerialists, are from Spain.

Thus it may be seen that with the whole world drawn from novelty is sure to be the result. Much more than usual interest also attaches to this year's show because of its new parade, its glittering introductory spectacle and the greatly enlarged menagerie.

The Mysterious Fires Continue In Calloway County.

Paducah, Ky., Sept. 15.—A mysterious fire in Calloway county destroyed the hotel at Hazel, resulting in a loss of about $2,000. Only a few guests were in the hotel, and they had narrow escapes. The structure was frame. Last spring the tobacco warehouse of Palmer & Brown was destroyed by fire at Hazel and several residences have been burned.
The fires were of unknown origin.

Paris, Ky., Sept. 15.—Three and relieved him of $500 and some hold-up was reported from Buck-same men. Early this morning a farmer returning home was held up and relieved of $55 and his watch on the North Middletown pike. Two of the men wore black masks, while the third had a white handkerchief over his face. The officers are work-

A War Veteran's Tribute to Per-u-na.

"The war left me with a complication of stomach, liver and kidney troubles, and I decided to take Peruna for my affliction. I began to use it about five years ago at the earnest solicitation of some friends. At that time I was only able to be up about half of the time, and my health was simply miserable. Open Letter.

To the voters of Christian County:

In view of the election to the office of County Judge this fall, and in view of the fact that possibly weeks will elapse ere the nominations are made, which will leave but a short space of time for one, after receiving the nomination of his party, to make a canvass. I take this opportunity of presenting my candidacy for the nomination of the Republican party as County Judge for the remainder of the present term, and, if successful in receiving said nomination, to request the suffrage of my party, my friends and of all men who believe in the enforcement of law.

Having served the people of this county faithfully since my induction into office on Dec. 19, 1907, I feel that I have a right to call upon them for endorsement for at least the remainder of the present term.

Some one has said: "Be loyal to your convictions, have courage to express them and wait for the judgment of history to decide their merit." This has been my motto, and I have tried faithfully without "fuss or feathers" to live true to it. The few short months in which I have served the people of this county, my trials have been many, varied and oppressive. I have been true to my oath of office and turned a deaf ear to the clamorings of interested politicians. By some of the interested politicians I have been censured for doing my duty in removing Mr. David Smith, the late Sheriff, from office, and appointing Mr. Eenshaw as his successor, and some of these scheming politicians were so prejudiced as to criticize my acts as a "political scheme" to oust a Democrat and appoint a Republican, and yet, when a Democratic Court of Appeals reversed the opinion of the Circuit Court and in no uncertain language upheld my action in this matter, when the Court of Appeals in their decision said "The order of the world had notice of the fact from the Statute itself," and "the provisions of the Statute are for the benefit of the tax-payers and the public," and when said Court directed the dismissal of the writ of prohibition granted by Judge Cooks against me, may I ask, was there a single politician among them that offered to present the facts as they really were, or has one of them acknowledged, that perhaps they were attempting to work the "political scheme" while I was simply doing that which my oath of office and duty required?

The facts in the case are, in substance, as follows:—At no time, since entering upon the duties of my office, on the 19th day of December, 1907, has Mr. Smith, or any one representing him, attempted to remove him, up to March 10th, 1908, approached me, either as a private citizen or as County Judge of this county, relative to a quietus from the Fiscal Court of this county, or as to a settlement by Mr. Smith as such Sheriff, or as to a bond or any bonds that may be annually required of the Sheriff, or as to any matters pertaining thereto, statements to the contrary notwithstanding.

Mr. Smith failed to execute the annual bonds required of him as Sheriff, by law, at no time did he, or any one representing him, attempt to offer in any manner to make the required bonds before me as County Judge, until after I had caused the order removing him from office to be entered, although he was notified in January and February 1908, by his then sureties, The United States Fidelity & Guaranty Company, that they would not renew his bonds for the year 1908, unless he (Smith) would make to them an indemnifying bond in the sum of $10,000, which indemnifying bond Mr. Smith did not make or offer to make.

Trusting that the interested politicians will concede that I had as much right under the law to remove Mr. Smith from office on the 2nd day of March, 1908, as I had on the 11th day of March (the bonds being required March 1st), I wish to say, that it was not my desire to remove Mr. Smith, simply because he did not make the bonds as required at the exact moment they were due, and for this reason the order was not entered until I was informed by the representative (Mr. Dugan, Louisville, Ky.) about 11 o'clock March 11th, 1908, that they, The United States Fidelity & Guaranty Company, would not renew Mr. Smith's bonds. Previous to this refusal of said Bonding Company, I was informed, and said information is now of record in the Christian Circuit Clerk's office, that Mr. Smith had said "while my office he had spent money belonging to the county but that he (Smith) was able to repay same, that he did not believe it would exceed four thousand dollars," and I want to say that this information was not given by any interested politician, but by persons of the best character, whose reputation for honesty, truthfulness and integrity stand unimpeachable in the minds of all honest men; therefore I say without fear of successful contradiction, that questions of vital importance to the tax-payers of this county had more to do with the removal of Mr. Smith than anything else, and if any man doubt the truthfulness of my statements let him read the record. When these facts were made known to me, I made up my mind that it was my duty, as County Judge, to remove or cause to be removed, any officer guilty of such conduct, regardless of politics, and I immediately began an investigation of the law, and found that upon which the order of removal was issued.

It is claimed that nothing was stated in my order of removal that would indicate anything wrong in the Sheriff's office; that is true, but as I did not think it necessary to do so to make the order good or binding in law, and not desiring to humiliate Mr. Smith or any one else, and having, I trust, some of the milk of human kindness in my breast, I preferred to leave any such charge out of the order, and take upon myself some of the unjust criticism that I knew would fall upon me; and speak now, only when certain interested politicians attempt to lay all the blame upon me and urge the people to believe that my actions were an "unwarranted exercise of judicial discretion."

Does it appear to you, my friends,

1 Republican), would permit me, a Republican, to use an "unwarranted exercise of judicial discretion" in removing a Democrat from office? I would like to ask those gentlemen composing the Democratic Mass Convention who met here on September 7th, in your resolutions, did you not denounce the Democratic Court of Appeals as being "arbitrary, partisan and corrupt, etc.," for removing Smith from office, and why did you denounce my actions as being "arbitrary, partisan and corrupt, etc.," when the Court of Appeals has upheld the action of the County Court, and reversed the action of the Circuit Court? Is it that your draftsman in drawing those resolutions named the wrong court? I rendered my decision in fear of no man or set of men, but in obedience to the dictation of a clear conscience and under my oath of office. Whether or not my actions under the facts meet with the approval of the tax-payers of this county, I leave with them.

In further answer to these "interested politicians" and to prove that I am not attempting to play the dirty game of politics, I desire to say, that on the night of March 10th, 1908, and while I was examining the law pertaining to my duty in this matter, a certain Democratic politician came to my office and requested me not to remove Mr. Smith, stating that he would admit that perhaps Mr. Smith had not run the Sheriff's office exactly right, but if such was true, that it was negligence on Mr. Smith's part and not any criminal intention to do wrong, and further this party stated to me, that he and other Democratic politicians had held a conference and had come to the conclusion that they were glad Governor Willson had appointed me to office, that they believed I would make an efficient officer, and if I would not make the order removing Mr. Smith, he would assure me, that, in so far as the Democratic party was concerned, I would have no opposition to the office of County Judge this year or next. His offer was courteously declined.

On April 13th, 1908, I entered a motion before the Fiscal Court, composed of the magistrates of the county, asking that a bi-partisan board, one Democrat and one Republican, each to be a competent accountant, be appointed for the purpose of examining the books of the Sheriff's office, and make a report as to the actual conditions of Mr. Smith's accounts. This motion was voted down by a unanimous Democratic vote, as will appear from the minutes of said court on said date, and I would like to know why this was done if not for the purpose of shielding Mr. Smith. At least does it look like a partisan move on my part or does it appear to be a fair proposition? Why should the Fiscal Court refuse an examination of the books of any county officer when a charge like this confronts the officer? And why did the same court, when 3 months had elapsed, vote to allow an examination? Was it because it was known that a Republican majority of the court was present and that they demanded an investigation? I desire to say that in accordance with the opinion of the highest court in our State, I have done my duty in this matter, and if my record as a public officer can always stand the search-light of the law as it has in this matter, I shall point to it in years to come with pride.

Having stated my position fully in this matter, I trust the good people of this county who believe in enforcing the law will investigate its truthfulness, satisfy themselves and act accordingly.

By my political enemies it is being said, that I am an enemy of the farmer and the farmer's interests. This is done not to assist the farmer, but to injure me. Having done nothing that will condemn me in the sound judgment of any man, they attempt to appeal to passion instead. I was raised a farmer's boy, and know the trials and tribulations of a man, who of necessity must till the soil for his daily bread and have no hesitancy in saying that at all times I will be ready when called upon, to help the farmer in his fight for right.

I thank God that I believe in a party that has always stood for the enforcement of the law, not only by its resolutions, but by its acts and the acts of the officials of this country who believe in its principles; and should that party ever forsake those principles, it will go down to defeat, and by all that is just and right, it ought to. The humblest farmer in his cabin has as much right to the protec-our State become so weak as not to protect the one, the other will be in danger even in the capital of our nation. At times the clouds may hang low, we may have wars and rumors of wars, you may think the criminals have taken possession of our land, and that all is lost, but I thank God that we have several thousand good men in this county alone who will not bend the knee in fear and trembling and who will stand for the supremacy of the law and die by those principles if necessary to uphold its sanctity. There is not a good Democrat nor a good Republican in Christian county who is a night rider and a criminal, or who is in sympathy with the lawlessness that abounds, and I want to say that if there be a Republican in this county who feels that he cannot vote for me because I am opposed to the night rider or the criminal—it matters not the name—who is to-day enveloping in shame and disgrace the name of old Kentucky, I want him to vote some other ticket, and then tell his God the reason why he did it. For every Republican vote I may lose on that score I will receive the votes of an hundred good Democrats.

To the principles advocated herein, I pledge to the good people of this county, if nominated and elected, my every earnest endeavor, my hearty support; to give to the citizens of this county regardless of their station in life, the protection guaranteed to the people by the Constitution of our State; in so far as my power lies, to use my every effort to the upbuilding of the public roads of the county and to deal open handed justice alike to all; to pursue the same course in the future I have in the past, to guard with zeal the settlements of administrators, guardians, executors and committees, that the estates of decedents may be protected, that children, old and infirm people may be protected and receive that which is theirs.

Appealing to my party, my friends and to all men who believe in the upholding of law, to give me their support at the next general election, should I receive the nomination of my party, and assuring you and each of you of my hearty appreciation and hoping to see and thank you in person, I beg to remain,

Loyally yours,
CHAS. O. PROWSE.

Barter and Exchange.

By JANE LEE.

Copyrighted, 1908, by P. C. KRAMER.

The evening paper contained very little news. Evening papers were getting stupid and dry—at least so thought Ethel Yorke as she turned over one page after the other in hopes of finding an item of some interest.

Alas! Her glance wandered from the sheet to another, and her attention was finally attracted to the "exchange" column. Only one ad. seemed to interest her. She read it to the end, amused to herself, "I wonder," then read it again aloud to herself to see if it sounded the least bit plausible.

"Will exchange a first class typewriter in A1 condition for genuine antiques. Fakirs need not apply. J. B. G. Box 411."

"Antiques" commented Ethel to herself. "Well, we're strong on antiques—have everything from the human to still life, from dear old Aunt Cornelia to the pen used in signing the Declaration of Independence. Then, again, Aunt Cornelia is worth more than a secondhand typewriter, and the pen is probably not worth the bell on the old machine. Let me think."

Aunt Cornelia appeared at the doorway as if in answer to the suggestion. "Whom are you talking to, Ethel?" she asked as she glanced around the apparently empty room. "It seems to be a very one-sided conversation, for I hear only your own voice," she added. "Auntie, dear, I am conversing with a very bright young person of my acquaintance—none other than yours truly, Ethel Yorke," said Ethel, with a sweeping bow. "Auntie, I want a typewriter, and—"

"I know you do, dearie, but talking to yourself won't get one." "Auntie, I'm not fooling. I want a typewriter, and I'm going to get one. Bebold!" said Ethel as she presented Aunt Cornelia with the ad. to read. The old lady read it carefully, glanced at Ethel, then said:

"Well, dearie, there is the old melodeon. That is a true antique. Your Grandfather Parker gave that to your grandmother for a wedding present. It is all carved by hand and inlaid with beakwood."

Aunt Cornelia sighed as she went on. "I suppose if you want to learn to be a stenographer and go out in the workaday world you must have a typewriter on which to learn, and I guess you had better offer the dear old melodeon in exchange."

The ad. was duly answered, and within forty-eight hours a prompt reply was received saying that the owner of the typewriter would call that evening to inspect the so-called antique.

Ethel answered the doorbell of the little apartment that evening, for the household boasted of no maid since the loss of their little fortune. A tall, smartly dressed man entered and was ushered into the sitting room, followed by Ethel.

"Are you the young lady who wants a typewriter?" he asked as he took in the graceful lines of her well rounded figure, her mass of red brown hair and the even contour of her beautiful face.

"Yes," she replied as she offered him a chair. "I want to become an expert typist, and I was attracted by your ad. Here is the melodeon, if you want to look it over," and she walked across the room and lighted another gas jet to exhibit her heirloom to better advantage. The man followed in silence.

"It's a really, truly antique," said Ethel. "I'm not a fakir such as you suggest in your ad."

The young man walked up to the beautiful old melodeon, a priceless treasure to one who knew its value. For the moment he seemed lost in its admiration of the delicate workmanship, the beautifully tinted woods, and he sat down before it, dreaming. The girl looked at the man as if upon the figure in a picture. The lights fell upon him as he sat before the instrument, and she wondered why he did not speak. Maybe, after all, the old thing was worth nothing.

Howard Phillips, man of leisure and collector of antiques, turned to his companion, hardly knowing which he admired most, the inlaid wooden treasure or the beautiful girl.

"If acceptable to you, Miss Yorke, I will take the melodeon, giving you in exchange the typewriter and a bonus of $50," he finally said. "The instrument is a beauty and a very rare specimen," he added.

The final arrangements were completed, and the next day found Ethel in possession of a typewriter and Phillips with the melodeon. Phillips went on with his search for antiques, but somehow he felt that the greatest treasure on which his eyes had rested in months—aye, even years—was the girl whose face seemed to haunt his dreams.

A terrific snow and hail storm kept him indoors some weeks after the purchase, and Phillips sat down before the instrument to see what sort of music it would produce. His fingers ran over the keys, but no sound came forth. He peddled with greater force, yet silence was his only reward.

Something was wrong within, and his deft fingers went to work in the mechanism, and after several minutes' search he was rewarded by finding a package pressed against the keys.

The package was apparently a wad of old papers, but, with the true instinct of the collector, Phillips began to undo the yards and yards of tangle.

right than possession. The girl's money!

He counted it carefully twice—$1,800. He must find the girl and return it. Here was the longed for excuse to see her again.

The storm had somewhat abated, and in a few minutes he started to the little apartment in search of the girl. He was informed that the Yorkes had moved out three weeks ago. Where? Nobody knew. The janitor thought they had moved to a smaller flat in Harlan.

Now that he could not find the girl Phillips realized the folly of not having kept track of her. Perhaps it had been love at first sight. Indeed, as he thought about it seriously he knew that he was very much in love. But how could he tell her so if he could not find her?

A visit to the postoffice left him none the wiser. They furnished no addresses. He drifted home to his open fire and the evening paper. He sat in the twilight gazing in the embers, and it seemed that every flame carried with it a shadow of the girl.

He read the advertisements from force of habit and was about to throw the paper down and curl his pipe when his eye caught this ad:

"Young lady will give French lessons in exchange for lessons on the typewriter. Apply after 6. E. T. Y. 2 Broadway."

Phillips sat up a bit straighter in his armchair. Could it be she? At least it was worth finding out.

At 8 o'clock that evening Phillips rang the bell of the Harlan flat, to be admitted and made welcome by Ethel.

"You see, Miss Yorke, I am here again," he said as he entered the room. She seemed more lovely than ever. "I have been trying to find you for a long time, but you had run away from your old home, and I only traced you by the exchange column. The offer is well—how would you consider me as a teacher?"

Ethel's eyes danced. "You see, Mr. Phillips, I tried so hard to find it up, but could not, so I thought of your idea of exchange and put that ad. in the paper," she explained. "I did not dream you might typist."

"To be honest, I do not. But I have something here—something I found in the old melodeon that will buy hundreds of lessons. And he handed her the precious roll of bills.

A cry of joy brought Aunt Cornelia to the room, and a careful inspection of the money revived memories of a queer maiden aunt who did not believe in savings banks.

Of course Phillips had to remain and discuss the wonderful find, and this made him one of the tiny circle, so that the text ad. inserted by Ethel appeared under the column headed "Marriages."

The Diamond. Writing on "The Romance of the Diamond" in the Northern American Review, Sir William Crookes refers to the theory advanced by some scientists that the diamond is a gift from heaven conveyed to earth in meteoric showers, and he confesses that the theory is not without support. His description of the Kimberley diamond mines is interesting. The writer says:

"Many circumstances point to the conclusion that the diamond of the chemist and the diamond of the mine are strangely akin to the origin of it is evident that the diamond has not been formed in situ in the blue ground where it is found. The genesis must have taken place at vast depths under enormous pressure. The explosion of large diamonds on coming to the surface shows extreme tension. More diamonds are found in fragments and splinters than in perfect crystals, and it is noteworthy that, although these splinters and fragments must be derived from the breaking up of a large crystal, yet in only one instance have pieces been found which could be fitted together, and these occurred at different levels. Does not this fact point to the conclusion that the blue ground is not their true matrix? Nature does not make fragments of crystals. As the edges of the crystals are still sharp and unrounded, the locus of formation cannot have been very distant from the present sites. There were probably many sites of crystallization differing in place and time or we should not see such distinctive characters in the gems from different mines nor indeed in diamonds from different parts of the same mine."

Inappropriate Songs. "Our Sunday school superintendent once gave a lecture on inappropriate songs," says a musical director of an uptown church. "In which he told of visiting the primary room to find the infants lustily singing:

"My latest sun is sinking fast.
My race is nearly run."

"And our presiding elder used to tell, with great glee, of a bishop who at a general conference retired with his committee to the annex to finish an important report, a song service to fill the gap. As the returning clergymen filed down the main aisle, headed by the bishop, the chorus came out on:

"See the mighty hosts advancing, Satan leading on."

"But the most amusing incident that really came under my own observation was while assisting in a revival service in a small western town. The evangelist seemed to find in a very successful doctor of that place a subject for special and unusual effort. One evening, while he was earnestly exhorting with the medical gentleman to come to the altar, an enthusiastic sister began singing:

"The sweet physician now is near.
A smile ran through the audience, the doctor's eyes twinkled, and the divine himself with difficulty maintained a straight face. It is needless to

SUES PACKING COMPANY

Alleging That Product Contained Poison.

George A. Pike of Kelly, as administrator of Ora Pike, his three-year-old daughter, who died July 3 from ptomaine poisoning, has filed suit here against the Evansville Packing Co. for $2,000 damages. Plaintiff alleges that the child ate some bologna sausage manufactured by the defendant and sold to a customer in Evansville who sold some of the meat to a grocer at Kelly, and that the child died in three hours after partaking of some of the sausage. He further alleges that after the death of his child, he had some of the meat analyzed by a physician and it was found to contain poison and that the poisoned condition of the meat produced the death of the child.

SUIT AGAINST RIDERS.

Prepared by the Attorneys of Henry Bennett, of Dycusburg.

Faducan, Ky., Sept. 15.—Attorneys to-day prepared the suit of Henry Bennett against alleged night riders, who burned his warehouse and whipped him at Dycusburg last February. The defendants reside in Lyon and Trigg counties. Carl Henderson, County Attorney of Crittenden county, and Campbell & Campbell, of Paducah, represent him. The suit will be filed in the Federal Court at Louisville Wednesday.

State Fair Experiment Farm

The little experiment farm which the Southern Agriculturist and the Tennessee Experiment Station have provided for the Tennessee State Fair, which will be held at Nashville next week, is going to be one of the most practical demonstrations at the fair. In this plot Mr. Ewing Hite, the representative of the Experiment Station, has planted eight varieties of corn, eight varieties of soy beans, nine different kinds of pasture for hogs, six varieties of sorghums and canes, four different winter cover crops, two varieties of field peas, five combinations for hay crops and several varieties each of tobacco and cotton—the two last named being shown both with and without fertilizer.

Every plot will be so labeled that anyone can tell at a glance the variety planted therein, the date of planting, the fertilizer necessary under certain conditions and other information that will be of vital interest to long headed farmers. Competent demonstrators will also be on hand to answer questions.

A VALUABLE HORSE SHOW

John Robinson's Splendid Array of Imported and Domestic Equine Beauties at Horse Show
In Itself.

Horseshell has always been more a matter of fad with the owner of the John Robinson Big Circus than one of business, for if a horse caught his fancy the price was a secondary consideration, and the result is the show boasts of the finest lot of horses in the circus world.

From a magnificent herd of Arabian whirling steeds of the desert, the limbed racing thoroughbreds from Kentucky's blue grass region, deep-chested English jumping horses, and the horse markets of the world furnished the hundreds of broad backed draft horses, all thoroughbred Norman and Percheron stock, down to the diminutive Shetland and Welsh ponies, it's a horseman's paradise, this show of equine supremacy.

The advance heralds tell of the coming of the show to our city on Sept. 21, and the lovers of all that is to be admired in horseshell will enjoy the treat.

SAME TRICK

Boy Repeats the Theft of Horse and Buggy.

The Nashville Tennessean of Tuesday contained this item, which probably referred to Floyd Mabry, the boy who stole E. D. Jones' horse and buggy Sept. 7 and fled to Lebanon, Tenn.:

"Claiming that he desired to ride about for a half-hour or so, Lee Cocks, alias Mayberry, a youth of about 15 years of age, went to the livery stable of J. E. Burton, 174 Third avenue, north, yesterday morning, hired a horse and buggy, and a few hours later word was received by Detective Irvin of the local police force from officers in Lebanon, that a young man answering the description was held at Mt. Juliet, where he had been attempting to dispose of a horse and buggy. Steps were taken at once to bring the boy back to Nashville. It is said that young Cocks resides at 2002 Illinois avenue, and that this is the second scrape of this nature he has been in. It is stated that a week or so ago he hired a horse and buggy in Hopkinsville and brought it to Nashville where he attempted to dispose of it."

Mr. Jones returned home Tuesday with his horse recovered at Lebanon and the buggy found at Greenbrier, Tenn., with the assistance of the Hopkinsville police.

The Mabry boy, unless Tennessee justice is handicapped with a so-called juvenile law, will probably wind up in the penitentiary.

KENTUCKY GIRL

Causes Former Owensboro
Boy to Get in Bad Scrape.

Chicago, Sept. 15.—John F. L. Rowe, the alleged fiance of Miss Alberta Myers, of Owensboro, waived examination when arraigned before United States Commissioner Mark Foote today on the charge of stealing two silver half dollars from a letter. He was held to the Federal grand jury in $2,000 bond.

Young Rowe was employed as a clerk in the Chicago postoffice and the postoffice inspector says he has been stealing from the mails for several months. They say he may have taken altogether $1,500. In a statement it is declared that the young clerk said he was anxious to have sufficient funds on which to get married. His salary was only $50 a month. Rowe formerly lived in Owensboro.

18,000 GAIN IN MAINE

Republicans Started By the Close Results of Monday's Election.

A DEMOCRATIC VICTORY

Two Parties Split Even in Twenty Chief Cities, Each Securing Ten.

Portland, Maine, Sept. 16.—The republicans carried Maine Monday by about 2,000 plurality, as against 26,816 in the last presidential year and 6,064 in 1906. At midnight returns from 468 out of 619 cities and towns in the state gave for governor: Bert M. Fernald of Portland, republican, 72,117; Obadiah Gardner of Rockland, democrat, 64,993.

In 1904 the same places gave 74,419 for Gov. Cobb, republican, and 49,141 for Davis, democrat. The two parties split even in the twenty cities, each capturing ten. The voting was particularly heavy in the rural districts, where the democrats won through the popularity of Mr. Gardner among the farmers, made great gains.

RESULT STARTLED REPUBLICANS
The result, which was much closer than any of the republican leaders had anticipated, showed not only the warmth of the contest, but the popularity of Gardner throughout the state. The republicans were on the defensive throughout the campaign seeking to hold the state by the usual plurality.

BY OVER 50,000

Democrats Elect Governor in Arkansas by Usual Big Majority.

Little Rock, Ark., Sept. 16.—Returns from Monday's state election indicates that the entire Democratic state ticket ticket, headed by George W. Donaghey for governor, has been elected by the usual large majority, which will probably reach 50,000. According to returns received, the prohibition contest brought out a large vote. The day was clear and the farmers generally went to the polls. Several anti-prohibitionist leaders in Little Rock claim to have received advices that the prohibitionists have made but little gain. In Pulaski county, in which Little Rock is situated, the prohibitionists concede their defeat.

LEW K. KERBAUGH Once Popular Type Drummer In Jail On Felony Charge.

L. K. Kerbaugh, formerly a well known traveling salesman for various type foundries and printing press companies, is awaiting action by the grand jury at Cedar Rapids, Iowa, under a charge of obtaining money under false pretenses. At last accounts he was in the Linn county jail. Kerbaugh is also wanted in this city for cashing a bogus check on the First National bank of Cleveland, Ohio, the 24th of last June. The check was for $30 and the authorities at Cedar Rapids have been directed to hold him if he escapes a penitentiary sentence in Iowa.

He is known in nearly every printing office in this part of Kentucky, as he was at one time one of the best known drummers on the road, with headquarters at Nashville. It seems, however, that he has turned out to be an all round crook.

Night Riders.

Night riders are said to be organizing in northeastern Arkansas for the purpose of reducing the acreage of cotton and controlling the price.

WESTMINSTER CHURCH New Name of Ninth Street Presbyterian Church.

The name of the Ninth Street Presbyterian church has been changed to the Westminster Presbyterian church. The change was made necessary by the changing of the name of Ninth street to Second avenue. This is the fourth name the church has been given. The previous names were Old School Presbyterian church, Nashville Street Presbyterian church and Ninth Street Presbyterian church. At one time it was also known locally as the Southern Presbyterian church.

Thomas will address the gathering in the interest of the Democratic ticket. The Todd county Democratic committee met at the court house and selected Saturday, December 5, as the day for holding a county primary.

Valuable Pearl.

Charles King, who for the past two years has been engaged in mussel digging near Louisville and Lewisport, Ky., made a valuable find while working near Lewisport a few days ago. He found a pearl, perfect in shape, which he sold for $800. Another was found by a different party who refused an offer of $500 for it.

Result in Hopkins.

The Tobacco Association committee of Hopkins county re-elected Bradley Wilson chairman and elected J. S. Beshears vice chairman and W. L. Harris, secretary.

"You have to SHOW ME"

The man who follows this principle knows what he's doing, knows what he's buying. His money goes farther than the man who takes things for granted. We like to do business with the "show me" man. Right here we want to extend him a cordial invitation to call at our store. We want to show him the best made buggy on Earth—the famous ANCHOR.

We'll show him why it's the best, by showing him how it is built and the material it is built of. We'll throw on the limelight of critical inspection, for the closer you examine an ANCHOR buggy the better it shows. If you're a "show me" man and want a buggy, don't fail to call on.
